He flatly disputed the claim of a former South Korean defence ministry official that there is a secret agreement between the U.S. and South Korean governments against such a withdrawal.

"We support the idea that young people should travel, particularly in a large, regional country like Canada," Miss Garay said.

DISTRIBUTED LEAFLETS

As corresponding secretary of Federal Employees for a Democratic Society (FEDS), also distributed antiwar leaflets on several occasions and had peace posters on his office door.

However, Brooks contends that his professional as well as political views were conected to his transfer and subsequent difficulties.

His reports criticized the federal helium program (which stockpiles the gas primarily for scientific use) and existing foreign oil import quotas as expensive. He also was a strong advocate of stringent health and

'CAUGHT UP'

Officials in the department Wednesday withheld comment on Brooks' charges. Their explanation was that he was merely caught up in the continuing reorganization of the Bureau of Mines.

A spokesman for Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel said that a reply to a June 11 letter from Brooks was 'under consideration.'

In that letter, Brooks told Hickel that "young and energetic employees ... have found this government to be increasingly repressive of our ideas and ideals, and too remote to hear what we are saying — quite in contrast to the climate you have been advocating."

Hickel has told his administration on several occasions recently that dissent should tolerated and "must be heard."

The other jobs which Brooksapplied for after his problems at the Bureau of Mines were with the Bureau of the Budget, the Appala-chian Regional Commission, and with a federally financed research project at the University of West Virginia.

Some estimates of this year's highway population range as high as one million

This bought a suddenly-strong response earlier this spring which saw the 30 hostel organizations initiate programs of their own and urge government help.

Twenty-two-year-old Patrick Esmonde-White is the Task Force's chief, describing himself as fully experienced "on both sides of the fence," both as a government official and as a well-travelled hitchhiker. ### FIRST STEP

"However, this is only a first step and my immediate problem is to get these beds into full operation," he said in an interview.

Esmonde-White said that the present program only envisions provision of beds although he hopes that some of the local committees, on their own initiative, may be able to provide refreshments or a hot meal.

should land in starving and without funds, there would be strenous efforts made to help them out but basically, for this year, anyway, the pro-gram is to provide beds under a roof for as many as possible."

The Task Force will evaluthe summer's efforts this fall to work up a coherent program recommendation for the future.

He said undoubtedly the assessment would include the feasibility of mounting a perm anent European-type youth hostel program in Canada.

Middle Eastern Manoeuvring

Middle East increases the chance of an eventual United States-Soviet clash in the Mediterranean. Sophisticated Soviet anti-aircraft missiles have been emplaced within a few miles of the Suez Canal and Israel expects Russian-manned fighters to be moved up to protect the expensive missile complexes.

In strategic terms this means the Israelis cannot attack Egyptian artillery emplacements on the west bank of the Suez Canal, or penetrate deeper into Egypt to destroy Nasser's offensive capabilities, unless they are willing to confront Soviet personnel. Israeli tacticians are faced with dubious alternatives. Avoiding combat with the Russians will allow the Egyptians and their Soviet "advisors" time to modernize the Arab army and step up raids on Israeli territory. A decision to take on the Russians might provide & Soviet rationalization for a full-scale Arab thrust into Israel or Israelioccupied territory.

The Israeli quandary is felt in Washington. Alarmed by recent Soviet Middle East military initiatives, President Nixon is still reluctant to sell Israel 125 jet fighter bombers pending future Soviet moves, and Egyptian reaction to the latest U.S. peace plan. But, in sometimes ambiguous statements, the Nixon administration has made

It boils down to the games the Russians are playing. There is every indication that the Kremlin wants to avoid a super-power confrontation. But the stakes are high and the Soviets are aware that the U.S. is bogged down in another war of attrition on the other side of the globe. Premier Nasser's prolonged Moscow stay could mean the Russians are negotiating a reopening of the Suez Canal which would extend the arms of Soviet foreign policy. Such easy access to the Indian Ocean would give the Soviet Union considerable leverage on India and Pakistan, as well as the oil-rich sheikdoms of the Persian Gulf. Israel's most important sea-route through the Gulf of Aqaba would then be subject to Soviet control.

Until Nasser returns from Moscow, his reaction to the U.S. proposal for a three-month reinstatement of the cease fire between Arab-Israeli forces will probably remain unknown. Soviet intentions are also masked. But history is repeating itself. The Russians reportedly have 10,000 to 12:000 advisors in Egypt — about the same number that President Kennedy employed in Vietnam a decade ago. # French the Working Language-Bourassa

DREMIER ROBERT BOURASSA, unwilling to be outflanked by the separatists, is taking a hard line on issues dear to the hearts of French Canadians - including at least one issue that English-speaking wish would just go away. That is the use French as the universal language of work in the province. Bourassa laid down his hard line at a meeting here with chiefs of 42 largepayroll firms operating in Quebec, warning them that they must work fast to counter the anglicization of commerce, especially here in the metropolis, or face a separatist reaction.

Addressing the industrialists in French, Mr. Bourassa said his government had decided to take all measures necessary to pursue its major policy objective of making French the working language everywhere in Quebec. He explained the urgency of his concern this "Is it necessary to recall that this country to which we belong has no reason to exist and to feel except with the presence of a Quebec, French by priority? Some, among our compatriots, have chosen the road of scission to attain this objective (of French priority). We believe . . . that the federal regime is the most appropriate way to favor the full flowering of the cultural and linguistic particularisms of the communities in which it groups.

For Growth

"One of these original traits, the most essential and the most important, is the language spoken by the majority of Quebec citizens. It is in his own language that the French Canadian aspires to contribute to the growth of Quebec and of Canada. The truth forces one to say that this legitimate aspiration is often denied in fact, more often by the natural pressure of an anglophone environment than by a conspiracy of those who hold economic and financial power.

"We have taken for granted until now that the sole mastery of the English language opens the road to success. thereby relegating the French language to the rank of a second language, simple vehicle of culture and folklore. This time is over. If it is true that a language has no reason to live but for its utility, if it is true that the language which we speak marks the particular character of our federation, if it is true that French carries the same weight as English, not only in the values of cultural enrichment but also in the realities of the technological world, it is then imperative that we mobilize our efforts to ensure everywhere its expansion and is promotion.

Then Mr. Bourassa made his appeal to business, with its accompanying warning:

"I urge you to act with the greatest possible speed because the situation is urgent. We must provide proof in the course of the next few years that the francophone Quebecker is capable, without breaking the ties that unite him to Canada, of working, living, and succeeding in his own language.

'If we fail in this primordial task, the consequences will be heavy for our

Co-operation Essential

While promising a series of governental initiatives to benefit the vitality of French in Quebec, he acknowledged that all measures would be illusory without the co-operation of industry, for which he thanked his guests in advance. Quebec-based industry has no choice but to co-operate, and the assembled executives knew it.

For years English has tended to be the working language of office life in higher, and often even in lower, echelons of national and international businesses he can't do it anywhere else accustomed to transferring personnel without regard to provincial borders, with large numbers of non-Frenchspeaking persons from outside Quebec serving in the Montreal office at any given moment. Since the Montreal English - speaking community is itself notorious for its collective inability to learn French, and since virtually all francophone personnel in such offices have at least a working knowledge of English, English becomes the language of work

'French After-Five'

But French Canadians, especially young ones, are buying this less and less They don't like the idea of using one language at the office and another at home. French, they hold, cannot survive only as "French after five o'clock."

Businessmen are as aware as Mr. Bourassa is of the touchy social climate here, and they accepted his harangue with a spirit of co-operation that left him elated. It also left him convinced that "pushing" of the use of French in business can be done without coercive measures, which could prove divisive and self-defeating. The English commun ity is aware as never before that the French Canadian must be able to realize himself in his own language here, since

Trudeau's 'Brutal Attack' on the Pearson Foreign Policy

A NYONE who glances even momentarily at the latest white paper on Canadian foreign policy can see that it is words, words, words, meaning only as much, or as little, as the government intends from time to time. But that is the purpose of a foreign policy when it attempts the impossible task of looking years, or decades, ahead. It must be vague enough to cover all eventualities, leave the government plenty of elbow room and provide escape hatches if the unexpected occurs, as it always

Nevertheless, the white paper, though deliberately grey, amorphous and obscure, is interesting since the words are obviously Pierre Trudeau's. It may not tell us anything very important about Canada's position in the world. It tells us a good deal about the prime minister. No one but he, for example, could have written the paragraph repudiating that modest, useful role which used to-give Canadians a feeling of decent selfrespect. It is risky, says the paper, to base foreign policy "on an assumption that Canada can be cast as the 'helpful fixer' in international affairs." No previous prime minister would have used such a colloquial idiom. Nor added, in the jargon of a corporate board room, that the "spinoffs" of Canadian policy may sometimes be valuable to other

The recognizable Trudeau style must nave caused acute literary cramps in the old-fashioned document writers of the East Block and set Mitchell Sharp's teeth on edge, but he has grinned bravely through the ordeal. And when the white paper launches a brutal attack on Lester Pearson his feelings can be guessed without any powerful feat of imagination.

Real Core

This attack is the real core, and danger, of the whole pronouncement. "At times in the past," it says, "public disenchantment with Canada's foreign policy was produced in part by an overemphasis on role and influence, obscuring policy objectives and national interests." Let the reader pause and ask what these words mean.

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Is Mr. Trudeau actually trying to tell us that Canada's role was overemphasized and unwise when Mackenzie King. as the friend of both, healed a dangerous breach between Franklin Roosevelt and Winston Churchill in the desperate days

Does Mr. Trudeau think that Louis St. Laurent was presumptuous and mistaken when he proposed, before any contemporary Western statesman, the establishment of the North Atlantic alliance?

Will Mr. Trudeau argue that Mr. Pearson disenchanted Canadians and damaged the nation's interests when he kept his head while those around him were losing theirs and persuaded the United Nations to settle the famous Suez crisis? The Nobel judges didn't think so, anyhow, and awarded him a peace prize. They appreciated Canada's role even if Mr. Trudeau didn't.

It is a mere platitude to say, as the white paper says, that foreign policy should be an extension of domestic policy and should protect national interests. Who ever supposed that it was intended to do anything else?

But what are Canada's true interests? Surely the paramount interest, dwarfing all others, is the maintenance of world peace. For if it breaks down in a final nuclear war there will be no Canadian interests and no Canada to protect. Mr. Trudeau's hopefully Just Society won't be recorded by a single footnote in the history books because none will be

Played Full Part

The practical question, then, as Mr. Trudeau certainly would agree, is how Canada can best contribute to the prevention of that war. Up to now, despite the condescending sniff of the white paper, Canada has done rather well under King, St. Laurent, Diefenbaker and Pearson because it did not hesitate to offer advice among foreign friends at opportune times and never refused to play its full part in both

Now, unhappily, the United Nations is sick, perhaps dying, as Mr. Pearson fears, and the world is dominated by two nuclear giants, with a third already emerging. In the face of this appalling prospect, should Canada wring its hands. throw in the towel and retreat to the old storm cellar of isolation where, God knows, no safety was found between the two world wars?

Mr. Trudeau will deny, of course, that he has anything like that in mind and at the moment he is moving in an opposite direction by seeking a dubious accommodation with China. Since he is neither a fool nor a coward but a man of extraordinary brilliance and rare courage, we must believe him.

Yet there runs through his white paper an unmistakable note of disillusionment (not to say despair) with the world and with Canada's allies as if, somehow, we could escape them, cultivate our own domestic garden and enjoy security when our only security against the Russian and Chinese predators is provided by the United States, whether we like it or not.

There also runs through the white alism when nationalism of the wrong sort is the supreme threat to peace. Mr. Trudeau will say, however, that his nationalism is of the right sort and I am willing to believe that, too.

No Safe Island

Canadian nationalism which means that we intend to solve our own problems in our own way, stand up for our own rights and earn the respect of foreigners by our own conduct is a fine ideal and Mr. Trudeau has often given it admirable expression. But the temptation inherent in the white paper rethe temptation to believe that Canada, expertly managed by a superior government, can be a safe island in the raging storm of these days, that the bell may toll for other people but never

It is fortunate, therefore, as Mr. Pearson and Mr. St. Laurent probably are thinking in their retirement, that the white paper really doesn't mean much, that foreign policy, as always, will be changed whenever necessary to suit events that no one, not even the brilliant Mr. Trudeau, can possibly foresee.

Toward Push-Button Warfare

Is Indochina to become a testing ground for Gen. Wil-liam Westmoreland's "Army of the Future"?

"I see battlefields or combat areas that are under 24-hour real or near real time surveillance of all types," he said last October. "I see said last October. "I see battlefields on which we can destroy anything we locate through instant communications and the almost instanneous application of highly lethal firepower . . . '

Now, of course our fireower is already quite lethal. In an average month. American B-52s drop 100,000 tons of bombs on South Vietnam (500,000 tons were dropped in the Pacific theatre during all of the Second World War). But with further progress towards an automated battlefield, greater efficiency in destruction is anticipated.

"On the battlefield of the future," Westmoreland pre-"enemy forces will be located, tracked and targeted almost instantaneously through the use of data links, computer assisted intelligence evaluating and automated fire control." So "the need for large forces to fix the opposi-tion physically will be less

"By comparison." Air Force and Space Digest says of Seek Data II, "no previous computer programming pack-age including those used for command and control of U.S. strategic forces, has been able to provide real-time control of situations as dynamic and ever-changing as the tactical air operations in a major theatre. Issuing orders to hundreds of aircraft in rough forward areas is a most difficult command and control task, Automation of this through Seek Data II should significantly increase the efficiency of our tactical air capability.'

In order to "fix" enemy, he has to be found. Westmoreland promises that the Army is significantly 'improving our capability' to find him.

A number of monitoring devices are already in use there. A two-foot long cylindrical sonobuoy, used by the Navy to track enemy submarines, was dropped into the Chi Minh trail in Laos and Cambodia. It records the sounds of enemy troops and trucks, stores the information until special planes fly overhead and pick up the information electronically. The recordings are transmitted to a Firepower "can be concen-trated without massing numbers of troops," Westmore-land told the U.S. Army Association last October 14. "In Vietnam where artillery and tactical air forces inflict over two-thirds of the enemy casualties, firepower is responsive as never before. It can rain destruction anywhere on the battlefield within within minutes . . . whether friendly troops are present or not."

This pinpointing is also being improved through the use of laser technology. Aviation Week and Space Tech-nology reports that "the success of many laser-related techniques in Southeast Asia and others now in trial in Eglin AFB and elsewhere presage widespread use of laser designator-ranger finds in at least those permissive military environments that degree prevailed over North Vietnam where the U.S. maintained air superiority.'

The Department of Defense has stated that laser-guided bombs, introduced in 1968, have led to a ten-fold increase in accuracy.

Laser finding equipment is being used by the Air Force to improve night bombing. The Army is developing use of lasers for illuminating night viewing and night observation devices, and as a rangefinder for helicopter weapon delivery and artillery spotting from both the air and the ground.

Research and development on new technical systems designed to improve firepower capabilities in Southeast Asia is being carried out. In the fiscal year 1971 defense budget, $27.9 million is allotted for the AX attack bomber, a small turboprop plane able to operate effec-tively at a wide range of subsonic speeds. The AX has a short takeoff and landing capability, is armed with a variety of conventional bombs and strafing guns, and is expected to be more reliable than the F-100, F-105 and F-5 planes now in use in Vietnam

Rene's Charm Turning Sour

THE GLOBE AND MAIL An Editorial

The tiny man in the slightly rumpled suit stood at the microphone, his face the familiar lament English Canadians have seen so often on television. The speech was bitter, racist. Rene Levesque. Delegates to the conference Quebec at University's Glendon Hall had waited two days for him -350 teachers and labor representatives. They were receptive. Expectant.

The magnetism of the man has always been tremendous, no less in English Canada than in Quebec. The wit, the style, the appeal of a kind of political Johnny Cash whose recounting of the hardship and injustice faced by French Canadians has had the ring of truth and the gut attraction of hurtin' music

But after he was finished what remained was a tiny man in a slightly rumpled suit who had just given a bitter, racist speech. The memory of the occasion won't of the aura of the man Nor of wit nor style. But of bitterness. An explicit, ugly

A reporter asked why he hated English Canada so much. "It's not hate," he said. An earlier Levesque might have turned to repartee to bring a laugh.

Or he might have waxed philosophical. Or he might have used the question to launch a rhetorical reply. Instead, two words — brutal and demeaning

Why? Was ne overtired? He certainly didn't look it. Was he still sour and disillusioned over his personal defeat in the election? Possibly, but the election was two months ago. There's been plenty of time to regain perspectives. Was it his conviction that a sinister and monolithic English conspiracy succeeded in hamstringing the Parti Quebecois at the polls by using every available unsavory tactic? He says it is. But are we to

At one point, Mr. Levesque stressed what may have been in the back of his mind all night long. "Separatists," he said, "are not going to be nice little institutionalized nuisances." This may explain his statements. But we wish hadn't chosen this conference to express them. There was good progress begun to impart to Ontario teachers and labor leaders a feeling what is happening in Quebec. The conference was constructive; Mr. Levesque, destructive. In fact he was

How Saigon Controls Students

The 60 foreign relief service volunteers in Vietnam, who remonstrated to President Nixon over the Cambodian invasion, touched on a fact of Vietnamese life which doesn't claim much coverage: the suppression of the Saigon

Pins under fingernails; truncheon beatings on knee caps and necks; cigarette burns to nipples and penis; electric shock to ears, tongue, genitals; soapy-water injections into ears, followed by beatings about the head—these are some of the refinements of Thieu-Ky student-justice.

The youths are tortured, then released as a warning to others who are struggling against the war and agitating about freedom of the press, the autonomy of the university, and other debits in Vietnamese society.

Leo Dorsey, a volunteer social worker with the Unitarian Universalist Com sought to take the sordid issue to Ambassador Bunker.

Of course he got nowhere. Dorsey was told that the Ambassador could not meet with him and his group, that they should meet instead with Deputy Ambassador Burger. ently they were told that this meeting was impos-spreading over the United States at a ate that litiliated science. From time to time the television networks showed special news film of the immense mess advancing through Chicago or Boston. It was depressing to watch.

We did not want there to be an immense mess. It was inconvenient. There was so much else to think about.

Baseball. Taxes. Little messes. Or something. There must have been something else to think about. In any case, what difference does it make? We did not want there to be an immense

One night while watching television our favorite program was interrupted by Walter Cronkite. He was at Immense Mess Control. In Texas, naturally. He Mess Control. In Texas, naturally. He intended to tell us ad nauseum about government efforts to reduce the immerise mess by lifting several experimental tons of it toward the moon. Or perhaps by clubbing it with

We all telephoned the network. "We don't want there to be an immense mess," we warned the switchboard. We telephoned Dr. Gallup. "Thirty-nine per cent of us do not believe the immense mess exists," we told him, "and another 13 per cent of us believe there is no mess of any dimension."

Sitting home one night watching television — we were too scared to go downtown at night on account of the downtown at might on account of the immense mess down there — we fell to arguing. Granny said there wasn't any immense mess at all, and if there was it, would go away if the newspapers would only quit writing about it.

Gramps said ,she didn't know what she was talking about, so Granny said, "well, let's phone up Vice-President Agnew and see what he says."

"There certainly wouldn't be any mess worth speaking of, Gramps," Agnew said, "if it were not for the television always standing around with its cameras warm, inviting messes of the most grotesque size to spread right up to the red eye."

"Glory be!" cried Granny. "There's a man who tells a woman what she wants to hear." Gramps, however, wanted to hear from President Nixon. He phoned 'Yes, my friends," said the president, "I have heard it said, even by persons who love America — and there are many of those even outside the Justice Department, let us never forget that for one moment — I have heard it said that there is an immense mess, and I intend to get the facts, because the president is the only man, of course, who can possibly have access to all the facts, and therefore I shall appoint a blue-ribbon presidential commission to investigate, first, whether a mess in fact exists, second, whether it is an immense mess as alleged and third, whether, if it is an immense mess, it is spreading, and, finally, and let me make this much perfectly clear, even if there is an immense mess and even if it is spreading, as alleged, there is still, my friends, a great deal that is right about America.

Uncle Pete told dad there was an immense mess all right and most of it was located in the Wille House. Dad became angry and said that any mess the president might eventually decide there was resulted because people like Uncle Pete let their hair grow and took a namby-pamby view of killing Com-munists just because they happened to practice Communism in obscure lands.

Uncle Pete said he was going to get some dynamite and blow up the house, since there was no possibility of communicating with dad in any other fashion. Cousin Mary, 19, said she hated all of us because all we could do was Dad said that kind of talk made him want to put a flag in the window and punch cousin Mary in the jaw for giving aid and comfort to the immense mess and not standing up to the problem like a man. Someone - Granny later said it was Gramps, but the evidence was inconclusive — fired five shots. Jim, the lodger, was hit in the calf, and Melva -Jim's girl friend - said he deserved to be wounded more seriously because he lacked the courage to assert pride in his race by setting the house on fire.

Mother said the house would be in an immense mess if we didn't relax. She coaxed us back to the television set.
Walter Cronkite was again talking from Immense Meet Control. "If it weren't for people like that always trying to stir up trouble," we whispered to one another, "everything would be right with this country."

Aunt Jane fire-bombed the family car for political, racial or personal reasons, about which she was none too clear.

Executors, through D. M. Goldie, seek in British Columbia Supreme Court an order which would quash Bennett's ruling that the $4,015,000 bequest from the late Mr. Woodward's estate was taxable.

Bennett, in his role as finance minister, ruled that the foundation was not a charitable organization and therefore was not exempt from succession duties.

Goldie said the foundation is a charitable organization and Bennett improperly "deprived" it of this status.

Antique Instruments Used in Fair Concert

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A Review

This week's concerts in the Victoria Fair series centred in the baroque and pre-baroque periods, ranging between the late 15th and mid-18th centures. Wednesday n i g h t 's program featured an engemble performing on antique instruments and formerly known as the Manitoba Consort, due to its connection with the University of Manitoba. Its leader, Christine Mather, has now given her name to the group.

CHARM, HUMOR

This was a concert of great historic and scholarly interest but it had ample charm and a spicing of humor as well.

The MacLaurin auditorium is ideal for the intimate nature of such a concert and as the instrumentation and the music were made for each other, and there was considerable variety in the character of the selec tions, one was not wearied by the limited range.

A quartet of instrumentalists playing a variety of instrument families including viols, krummhorns, recorders, percussions, as well as the lute and dulzian and a strange bottle-like creature called a racket, com-prise the Consort, with three singers.

These voices—soprano, mezzo and tenor— are delightful and some of the most exquisitely rendered music combined them with the instruments or poised a shining solo line against an instrumental polyphony.

SECOND CONCERT

Friday evening the Mather Consort will give its second concert performing music of the early, high and late baroque periods, from Monteverde

On Monday night at St. John's Anglican Church, the Singers with a small instrumental ensemble and Derek Healey at the organ, were conducted by George Corwin in an all-Bach-program

This compares with the $3,000 the government said it was worth and the $500,000 price set by his widow, Marina Porter.

The final report Wednesday y William W. West III, a former U.S. attorney here, is not binding on either Mrs. Porter o the government.

Either the widow or U.S. Attorney-General John N. Mitchell could ask for a jury trial to de-termine exactly how much comthe 500 items now held in the U.S. archives at Washington,

The parties also could waive jury trial and go before U.S. District Judge Joe E. Estes for a determination, or they could settle the case out of court.

Judge Estes ordered the U.S. government to pay West $3,126 for his work. West was appointed a special master by Judge Estes on Sept. 16, 1968, to market value as of Nov. 1, 1966.

Production Up in China

TOKYO (Reuters) - China's economy has recovered from the impact of the cultural revolution and production last year was running at the same level as in 1966, a leading Japanese economist said Wednesday.

Nagao Watanabe, senior offi-cial of the Bank of Japan research department, said China had a bumper crop harvest and boosted production of petroleum, steel and electric power

Chinese foreign trade last year also approached the 1966 level, he said.

But he predicted China would face a food shortage because of increased population; insufficient transport; a rise in national defence expenditure and an economic machinery system weakened by the expulsion of officials in factional strife.

Watanabe said China's popu lation in 1969 was estimated at 730,000,000 compared with an esimated 656,000,000 in 1957. Chinese defence expenditure was an estimated $8,000,000,000. more than 10 per cent of the gross national product and 30 per cent of the national budget. Vote to Close Ports

PLAN GOES SOUR

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) - James Pane, 22, stripped down to his shorts and undershirt, stood in line with some 50 other men at the YMCA waiting to take a physical examination for appointment to the police department.

At that point, four police detectives walked in and arrested Pane.

Pane was charged with armed robbery of a dairy store in Watertown the previous night.

WHY HARMFUL MAKES YOU SICK

Why do we get sick? Why do we die? The most reasonable explanation yet comes from Dr. Hans Selye, director of the University of Montreal's Institute of Experimental Medicine and Surgery. He says, "A motor car doesn't suddenly cease running because of old age. It stops because of old age. It stops because of some failure of some part that has worn out. It is the same with people. Under continuous stress—either physical or mental—some vital part gives away, leading to a vaniety of illnesses, and eventually death". A feature article in July Reader's Digest tells about different types of stress, and what can be done to minimize their ill effects. It shows how to cope with destructive emotions, how you could sleep better, work better and even live longer. Get your July Reader's Digest today!

Montreal Exchanges Plan Study

MONTREAL (CP) - The Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges announced they have jointly appointed a committee to study and recommendations of the Moore report on foreign acquisition of Canadian securities firms.

The new committee will specifically study the implications the recommendations of the report might have on Montreal exchanges and their members.

Peter A. Turcot, immediate past chairman of the govern-ment committee of the Montreal 2 exchange, was named chairman of the study commucee. All members of the six-man committee are from Montreal-based brokerage firms.

Moore committee The headed by Trevor Moore of Toronto, retired senior vice-president of Imperial Oil Ltd., concluded that foreign Com-panies should no longer be allowed to acquire ownership interest in Canadian securities firms.

Jerome Choquette, Quebec ninister of financial Institutions, said the report appears to be unfavorable to the Montreal exchanges and represents the view of Toronto stockbrokers.

The Moore study was spon-

+ 1/2 sored by the Toronto, Vanexchanges and the Investment - 1/2 Dealers' Association of Canada.

TOKELAU, Fiji Islands - The first cool nights of the winter season have come down on this tropical paradise. All day long the temperature is up to 85 or 90, with the humidity about the same. Yesterday the weather changed. Last night I was invited to a party given by the Nadi manager of British Overseas Airways. He said I needn't wear a jacket, as all the other men would be in their shirtsleeves.

But as I stepped out on the veranda at the hotel the wind had a distinct chill to it. I put on a light jacket to be

Some of the guests poked fun at me, a traveller from cold climate who was chilled on a lovely night in the Fiji Islands. It did no good to explain to them that a stiff-breeze in high humidity was something that could set an Arizonan's teeth chattering—winter of summer. Fancy, heated pools may be o.k. for some folks. But there are still two great, natural ways to beat the heat in a hurry. One's the old swimming hole. And the other's Old Style Beer. # Sheriff Defends | Bill Bans Grader Actions

BELLINGHAM, Wash.

"We feel the officers were we teel the officers were within their rights," he said in an interview. "They were wrong on a fe wthings but on the whole they had to stop that grader." He didn't say what they did wrong.

The incident occurred June 22 after grader operator Ernest Astells of Burnaby, B.C., was refused immediate payment of $684 from a Point Roberts man who had hired him for road work.

The grader plowed up part of the roadwork and later sliced a hole in a Sheriff's Office car. Then deputies chased it across the border at 30-35 m.p.h.

"That grader, going at that speed, went through two stop signs and could easily have killed someone," Reynolds "We are ready to back the action of our officers.'

Maoism Comes To Court

OSTLER kept temper

By STEVE HUME

The politics of confrontation came to a Victoria courtroom Wednesday afternoon with a flurry of slogans and Maoist rhetoric.

And when the shouting subsided in the prisoner's box, David Johannson, 25, of 821 Princess, had been sentenced to one month in prison for contempt of court.

Beforehand, Johannson had quietly carried the bulk of a well-argued defence for himself and 19-year-old Keith Gibbens, 4986 West Saanich Road.

The two men were before Judge William Ostler provincial court on a joint charge of selling the Maoist publication Mass Line without a business licence outside the government liquor store at McKenzie Ave. on June 13. But when Ostler brought down a verdict of guilty and sentenced the two to minimum fines of $25, Johannson lashed out verbally at the judge.

"You cannot obscure what you've done here by means of charades of language," he shouted at Ostler.
"You have just attacked the rights of the Canadian working class. You're a lackey judge. You're serving the enemies of the Canadian working class and they'll reckon with you.'

Ostler, who kept his temper throughout the outburst quietly instructed Johannson he was in contempt and would be punished.

"I have nothing more say to this group of flunkeys," Johannson shouted. "I hold this court in contempt. This is a

'The contempt of this court for the rights of the Canadian working class is going to be tried in the streets of As he was sentenced on the contempt ruling Johannson raised his fist to the gallery of about 25 spectators.

A single fist was raised in response, and as Ostler was dismissing another joint charge of obstructing a police officer, Johannson could be heard singing outside the courtroom on his way to the cells.

Gibbens remained silent and expressionless at his companion's side during the emotional statement, as did Johannson's pretty 22-year-old wife Elaine.

But as Ostler was retiring to his chambers Mrs. Johannson shouted at his back.

"Judge Ostler, you're a lackey of fascism and you're going to suffer the same fate as Eichmann," she cried.

The judge did not appear to hear the threat.

Earlier court was told a vendor in the liquor store asked the two to move and they refused. He subsequently called

Saanich police who said they could do nothing.
Ralph Lafferty, 1109 Sluggett, a witness for the prosecution, said he was a customer at the store, and when he saw the nature of what they were selling he asked if they business licence.

He said Johannson and Gibbens answered: "Do we need a licence to disseminate the words of Mao Tse-tung to the oppressed working people of Canada?"

In cross-examination by Johannson, Lafferty said he then called Saanich police and "told them you were selling communist newspapers in front of the liquor store and asked

Saanich police then attended. Inspector Harry Adams testified he completed a transaction for purchase of two issues at 10 and 25 cents.

Both charges were subsequently laid. During Johannson's cross-examination Ostler warned against immaterial questioning.

"This is not the place for ideological rhetoric," he said.

In presenting his defence, Johannson argued that since they were not making a profit but were selling Mass Line "at cost" they were not conducting a business activity as defined by the bylaw.

He argued further that "the police did not arrive until learned it was a communist paper We hold our presence here to be a result of har by the anti-communist police."

Prosecutor J. W. Anderson said the definition of the bylaw did not signify "a monetary gain or profit," and suggested the defendant had implied "a gain to the people and a gain to himself to advance the theories" of Mass Line.

Ostler ruled that while the two did not make any monetary profits from the newspapers, that was not the He said the exchange of money for newspapers constituted a "commercial undertaking."

While he was sympathetic to the argument that the two were seeking to disseminate their political views, Ostler said, "you can't disseminate such views as a commercial under-There is nothing to stop you doing it at no charge. It was at that point, just after the prosecution had asked

Trees Must Go to Stop Car Jams

By PETER MCNELLY

All the trees on Begble Street and all those on Finlayson between Blanshard and Cook will be cut down in road works projects approved by Victoria property owners in the Capital Budget referendum April 30, 1970.

Detailed plans for both projects already have been laid, and only a large public outcry can save the trees. For two reasons the trees on Begbie and Finlayson are marked to fall. The city is committed to widening and extending the streets. And if you widen a developed street, you have only two ways to do it. Chop down the trees or buy up the property behind them and crated a boulevard with a centre green. City engineer James Garnett says the scheme will also streamline the flow of traffic between downtown and two major shopping centres on the city's north and northeast boundaries.

The idea is to create a triangle of four-lane roads for shopping and rapid entry into and exit from the city's core. Part of the triangle already has been built, and that part is Blanshard Street. Side two is the Shelbourne-Begbie-Pandora-Johnson link The 25 oak trees in the 2500 block of Shelbourne which bled sawdust and fell on June alternate route into the city. Victoria alone will never be able wholly to finance such a project. Some joint financing scheme is inevitable.

Gov't Missed Point On Fund Says Chief

accused today of misinterpreting an Indian proposal for the administration of the First Citizens' Fund.

Chief Bernard Charles of Vancouver, assistant adminis-trator for the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, told the Times the premier wrongly inferred Wednesday that the union wanted to control and administer the fund established a year ago as a self-help program for Indians.

"We suggested that the fund be administered by a committee composed of Indian representatives from various bands," he said. "We did not propose that the union administer it."

He said Bennett's refusal to allow Indians to administer the fund indicated the government does not trust Indians or thinks they are not cap-able of doing the job.

$13,300 RETURNED

The union Tuesday decided to return $13,300 — the first quarterly instalment on a $53,000 grant the government made to the chief's union from the fund.

The union had asked for $230,000 to pay for the administration and for field workers to conduct a study of band needs throughout

The money comes from the First Citizens' Fund — the interest from $25,000,000 which the government aside two years ago. The fund earns about $1,700,000 a year POLICY LATER

Special Meeting On Salmonella

The Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health will hold a special meeting Friday to review developments follow-ing a salmonella outbreak four weeks ago.

Members will hear from senior medical officer Dr. J.

L. M. Whitbread on steps he and his staff have taken to block spread of the disease which hit about 60 reunion guests attending a dinner at the Empress June 13. Four of the victims eventually had to be admitted to hospital. All have since been released. The salmonella enteriditis organism caused severe diarrhea, cramps, headaches and vomiting. The organism is passed by a carrier through food and drink to others.

There were a few additional cases following the dinner when victims infected members of their families before the disease had been identified and the necessary scrupulous hygiene practices instituted. Since then there has been no further outbreak. Following the dinner, Whitbread restricted the hotel staff serving the meal from further work at food hand until laboratory tests showed each clear of the infection. He also launched his eight health inspectors in a crash inspection of Greater Victoria's 400 eating establish

The cottages sat at the edge the St. Lawrence. It was a scented night, with stars but no moon. Some of those stars seemed to have gone adrift in the fields between us and the river.

COVERS WHOLE RANGE

The recent exhibition at the Victoria and Albert Museum, Ethiopian Tradition, relied heavily on items she had collected during her travels.

Some of here recordings have been issued on three long playing records by Tingent Records. The records over the whole range of Ethiopian music from some of the most ancient surviving church music, through cov milking songs, trance music lasting for one whole side.

Surprisingly, with instruments ranging from the "harp of David," which Miss Jenkins insists is a lyre, not a harp, to wooden camel bells inpleasing to European ears.

Miss Jenkins herself feels that over the last four or fiv years the introduction of Indian music to Europe has made this type of record a reasonable proposition. It is, she thinks, something that Europeans can now get hooked on.

She is not so hopeful about the survival of traditional music in Africa and Asia. Her greatest enemy is the transistor radio which is killing many of the old sounds and instruments. This is why there is a certain sense of urgency in her work and why she will be off to Ethiopia again in November.

RAN BY DHOW

The effort involved can s o m etimes be enormous Many of the songs are work songs and she has to record them as and when they are being sung. This may involve running alongside a dhow on the shore of the Red Sea as it is being launched, or learning over the edge of a 70-foot well with her only microphone suspended 30 feet down to catch the reverberations of a song as men pass up buckets of water from the bottom.

Reward Offered In Church Theft

DUNCAN - St. Peter's Anglican Church members here have offered a "sizeable" reward for the return of invaluable church documents stolen from the church a week ago.

Rev. Neil Robinson said the papers, consisting of historical records of the Cowichan area dating back to 1866, were kept in an old safe taken by thieves.

He said they encountered no difficulty getting into the church because the doors had been removed for polishing. Robinson said the safe itself is of little consequence and contained no money.

"The documents are of great importance," he stressed. 'If they are returned there would be no questions asked and

CAREFRÉE* Tampons protect up to 3 hours longer.

Johnson & Johnson introduces CAREFREE, the most absorbent, the most reliable tampon ever made. It is, in fact, so absorbent that it can be worn up to 3 hours longer than ordinary tampons. Comes in Regular and Super absorbencies.

Available in Regular and Super absorbencies.

Here's why you get longer protection with CAREFREE: a traditional tampon expands lengthwise-becomes long and thin. CAREFREE is different. CAREFREE expands in width

It expands into a full, round, natural shape that adjusts itself to the body contours, moulding faithfully.

So CAREFREE protects better and longer.

CAREFREE is also the smallest tampon you can buy. It's smaller than a lipstick. That's because you don't need an applicator with CAREFREE. There's only the tampon-compact, smooth and firm enough to be used without an applicator.

'And because there's no cumbersome applicator to get rid of, CAREFREE is a truly disposable tampon.

Try the CAREFREE Tampon-a new concept in sanitary protection. It's the mini-tampon with the super absorbency.

Injunction Restraints Supported

WINNIPEG (CP) Manitoba government bill which would restrain injunc-tions on picketing received the support of two individuals representing varied interests the legislature's Law A m eon d m ents Committee

Wednesday. J. A. Coulter, executive secretary of the Manitoba Federation of Labor, said his group supports the bill, to amend the Queen's Bench

"Time and time again, injunctions have been issued . that have created imbalance in straight economic issues," he said. "In Manitoba there have been several instances where injunctions have been used for trumpedup charges of various natures."

The bill states a court shall not grant injunctions that require a person to work for his employer or restrain that person in the exercise of his right to freedom of speech. Mel Myers, expressing his own opinions as a lawyer, said the legislation's provi-sions take the freedom of speech principle "out of the area of platitudes and meaningless jargon."

He said it affirms the civil right of a person to decide who he should work for.

THIS IS TOM JONES. 7:30 p.m., Channel 8; 9 p.m., Channel 4. (Repeat) Paul Anka, Joni Mitchell and comedian George Kirby add sparkle to the show Some of the songs you'll hear are "Highway in the Wind" (Anka), "Let It Rock," "Funny, Familiar, Forgotten Feeling" (Jones), "Real Good for Free" and "Woodsfock" (Joni), and "When I Lay My Burden Down" (Kirby).

HAPPY DAYS, 8 p.m., Channel 7. Sounds of the Glenn Miller HAPPY DAYS, 8 p.m., Channel 1. Sounds of the Glenn Miller Band, "Chattanooga Choo Choo" and "Kalamazoo," from vocalist Tex Beneke, set the tone of the show tonight. Other items out of the trunk of the '30s include a snarling Edward G. Robinsori in old film clips, a Fibber McGee and Molly radio-routine, and more of those simple "knock-knock" jokes. Bob and Bay continue with their Mr. Acons resultings, interviewing a whom Ray continue with their Mr. Agony routines, interviewing a rube in the big city, and oldtimers will be pleased with such song selections as "Don't Blame Me" from Laara Lacey, and "The selections as "Don't Blame Me" from More I See You" from Alan Copeland.

IRONSIDE. 8:30-p.m., Channel 5. "The Wrong Time, the Wrong Place." (Repeat) An appealing portrayal of a young movie star by Tiffany Bolling makes this otherwise minor and contrived tale worthwhile. When a robbery suspect jostles against the actress at the airport moments before he's killed, the Chief she's now in need of police protection, we have a setup for a nice omantic interlude between square, dedicated policeman Ed Brown and the charming Miss Bolling.

BILL, COSBY. 8 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Lullaby and Goodnight. A neighbor's noisy dog keeps Chet awake all night ... and the next morning he has to attend a meeting with a representative of the president's physical fitness program To make matters worse, he can't complain to the neighbor, because she's a good-looking girl.

DEAN MARTIN. 8:30 p.m., Ch 8; 10 p.m., Ch. 7. (Repeat) Jimmy Stewarf and Leslie Uggams help Dean make the show tonight Though he's no David Frye, Stewart does a few impressions, and then joins Dean, who is shopping for a dress, being waited on by clerk Dom DeLuise. Leslie Uggams sings a medley with Martin and solos to "Louisville Lou"; Dom DeLuise lectures on the art of building a birdhouse; young Albert Brooks does a funny takeoff on ventriloquists; and hoofer Danny Lockinger "Denging".

BONANZA. 9 p.m., Channel 2. A Chicago meat packer tries to put pressure on Cartwright and other Virginia City ranchers to sell their beef at disastrously low prices. His lever is an effective one

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Some people know that there are two types of hepatitis, or inflammation of the liver. One is the common infectious hepatitis which we physicians and laymen have known for many years. It is usually a mild disease, perhaps with a little jaundice (yellowing of the eyes and skin), and a little fever. The patient gets over it in a few weeks. It has been shown to be due often to the drinking of infected water.

The other type is the serum hepatitis, which often is a severe and sometimes fatal disease. It comes most commonly from having been given a transfusion of diseased blood. In spite of every effort the blood banks have made, until recent months they haven't been able either to detect or to get rid of the virus of serum hepatitis in blood.

Another way of getting serum bepatitis is for a person, often a hippie, to use someone else's hypodermic syringe, that had not been properly sterilized and contains virus-bearing blood, for the taking of some drug.

It cheered me recently to read an article in the "Journal of the American Medical Association" by Drs. Saul Krugman and Joan Giles who say they are now able to recognize the "antigen" or "antibody" that the person produces in his blood when he has had an infection with one of the hepatitis viruses. This is important because it is a first step toward recognizing the virus.

The average incubation period between the entrance of the virus into the body and the appearance of the infectious hepatitis.

performed quickly enough, there will be less chance of using the ood of a virus carrier in a blood bank. Gamma globulin (an important fraction of the blood) neutralizes the infectiveness of infectious hepatitis, unfortunately, in most cases it does not protect a person against the very dangerous serum hepatitis. This is why the breakthat seems now to have been made is so hopeful;

perhaps now a serious medical problem will be entirely solved.

had most of the lymph glands removed from her armpit to make sure that all the cancer cells have been gotten out, will get a big, swollen arm that is extremely distressing to her. Over the years, doctors have tried various methods of relieving this distress, but women have been so frustrated and unhappy that they wanted to have the arm amputated.

For this reason, I was happy to read an article by Dr. Harry S. Goldsmith of the great Memorial Hospital for Cancer and Allied Diseases in New York City saying that some surgeons are helping these women by transplanting some of their omentum into the arm and the armpit. The omentum is a fat-containing, apronthe arm and the armpit. The omentum is a fat-containing, apron-like organ that hangs down inside the abdomen. Because it is full of blood and lymph vessels, the transplanted part of it may serve to carry the excess of lymph (the fluid that bathes our body cells, and which is responsible, as it accumulates, for the swelling of the woman's arm) from the arm across the armpit to the lymph channels of the chest wall.

I just got a telephone call from a woman who said she had been bleeding for half an hour from a big cut on her finger, which she had gotten while opening a can. She told me that every 30 seconds or so she would examine the cut to see if the bleeding had stopped, but the wound continued to bleed. I told her to hold the edges of the wound tightly together for 10 minutes by her watch, and then to look at it. By that time the blood will have clotted and the bleeding will have stopped.

Similarly, many a time during my many years in practice, I ave been called to see a person with a severe nosebleed which he said would not stop. The problem had been that the person was lying on his back in bed or on a couch, with the blood running down the back of his nose into his throat. By getting the person to turn over on his stomach, or to bend forward holding his nose closed tightly for 10 minutes by the clock, the blood would be able to clot and the nosebleed would be cured.

Asked by a student whether the world could be worn out this way before solutions to the problem are found, Dr. Currie said it is possible.

Some Advice for Hydrangea Lovers

The hardiest species of hydrangeas are much more easily grown than under the name of Hydrangea hortensis, having large globes of bloom.

named "Hills of Snow" Hydrangea arborescens grandiflora.

This is a low growing, rather lax shrub, to be pruned heavily each spring in early April, for the flowers are borne on new stems produced in May and June.

Leaves are light yellowish green, so that the shrub makes light colored mass in a border of darker foliage. Hydrangea "Pee-Gee" is now forming buds for flowering in later summer and will continue into fall with huge creamy panicles (cone-shaped) turning to old rose by the time hard

This hydrangea will ultimately grow into a tall, wide, well shaped shrub, or may be kept to three or four feet. Pruning of both these species is done in early April, by cutting back to two little growth buds on each stem of the plants. By April you can just see these buds although they don't begin growing until later.

In Hydrangea quercifolia (Oak-leaf hydrangea) we have something quite different and admittedly somewhat less winter hardy than the former two species.

This is usually seen at about three feet in height with large leaves turning magnificent red, wine and rose colors in fall. Flowers, if I remember correctly, resemble those of "Pee-Gee," foot-long panicles of creamy white, fading to old

The late George S. Kaufman, world-renowned play-wright, once walked into New York City's Cavendish Bridge Club and sat down to kibitz. In the first hand he wit-nessed, a pair went down 800 points — down three, doubled and vulnerable.

For the next 45 minutes nobody fulfilled a contract, every purchaser going down a trick or two. Then the same pair that had gone down 800 points on Mr. Kaufman's arrival, again went down 800

Mr. Kaufman stood up preparing to leave. "This is where I came in," he said.

If Kaufman had a singleton club—which seemed most likely—then if East played the king, it would get ruffed; and, simultaneously, dummy's queen would be promoted into a winner. After due delibera-tion, East elected to assume that South had started with a singleton club. So he played the eight-spot.

When Kaufman's jack won the trick, he promptly drew trumps and claimed his contract. Deceit had paid off.

"With the back-to-work order to the trades, this then produces a demand for our cement and building materials," he said.

'SYMPATHY ACTION'

The company closed several weeks after contractors locked out tradesmen in early April, claiming a drop in business. Union officials called it sympathy action with the contractors.

Prowse said this morning there was an initial flurry of demand but after that business "appears less than normal."

He expected demand will pick up early next week.

Contractors have said the lockout will be lifted Monday, but unions have said they won't go back to work until collective agreements are reached.

The B.C government has requested a resumption of work and said compulsory arbitration will be used if the ultimatum is ignored.

The other major cement and concrete supplier in Greater Victoria, Butler Lafarge, also reopened this morning. It closed April 27 saying it was unable to supply local needs because of a Teamster Union strike at its supply source in Vancouver April 4.

This was a concert of great historic and scholarly interest but it had ample charm and a

The MacLaurin auditorium is ideal for the intimate nature of such a concert and as the instrumentation and the music were made for each other, and there was considerable variety in the character of the selections, one was not wearied by

Oswald's Property Evaluated

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) - A federal court evaluator says per-sonal property left by Lee Harvey Oswald, who the Warren commission said killed Presi-dent John F. Kennedy, was worth $17,654.

This compares with the $3,000 the government said it was worth and the $500,000 price set by his widow, Marina Porter. The final report Wednesday by William W. West III, a for-mer U.S. attorney here, is not binding on either Mrs. Porter or the government.

Either the widow or U.S. Attorney-General John N. Mitchell could ask for a jury trial to determine exactly how much com-pensation would be due her for the 500 items now held in the U.S. archives at Washington, D.C.

The parties also could waive dury trial and go before U.S. District Judge Joe E. Estes for a determination, or they could settle the case out of court.

Judge Estes ordered the U.S. government to pay West $3,126 his work. West was a pointed a special master Judge Estes on Sept. 16, 1968, to appraise the property at fair market value as of Nov. 1, 1966

Production Up in China

TOKYO (Reuters) - China's conomy has recovered from the impact of the cultural revolution and production last year was running at the same level as in 1966, a leading Japanese economist said Wednesday.

Nagao Watanabe, senior offi-cial of the Bank of Japan research department, said China had a bumper crop harvest and boosted production of petroleum, steel and electric power in 1969. Chinese foreign trade last year also approached the 1966 level, he said.

But he predicted China would face a food shortage because of increased population; insufficient transport; a rise in na-tional defence expenditure and an economic machinery system veakened by the expulsion of officials in factional strife.

Chinese defence expenditure was an estimated $8,000,000,000, nore than 10 per cent of the gross national product and 30 per cent of the national budget.

Pane was charged with armed robbery of a dairy store in Watertown the previous night.

WHY HARMFUL TENSION MAKES YOU SICK

Why do we get sick? Why do we die? The most reasonable explanation yet comes from Dr. Hans Selye, director of the University of Montreal's Institute of Experimental Medicine and Surgery. He says, "A motor car doesn't suddenly cease running because of old age. It stops because of some failure of some part that has worn out. It is the same with people. Under continuous stress—either physical or mental—some vital part gives away, leading to a variety of illnesses, and eventually death". MONTREAL (CP) - The Montreal and Canadian stock inced they have study and recommendations of the Moore report on foreign acquisition of Canadian securi-

Peter A. Turcot, immediate past chairman of the government committee of the Montreal + ½ exchange, was named chairman of the study committee. All members of the six-man committee are from Montreal-based brokerage firms.

The Moore committee headed by Trevor Moore of retired senior vice-Toronto president of Imperial Oil Ltd., concluded that foreign Companies should no longer be allow-ed to acquire ownership interest + 2 in Canadian securities firms. Jerome Choquette, Quebec minister of financial institutions, said the report appears to be unfavorable to the Montreal exchanges and represents the view of Toronto stockbrokers. The Moore study was spon-

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) futures closed on a higher price pattern today, highlighting a day of otherwise dull activity at the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. Flax was the strongest grain on the board, but most gains were due to a lack of offers Activity in rapeseed at the open had disappeared by mid-session with early strength falling and all futures except July closing lower.

Oats, barley and rye prices moved fractionally in either direction on extremely light trade.

Maoism To Court

By STEVE HUME

The politics of confrontation came to a Victoria courtroom Wednesday afternoon with a flurry of slogans and Maoist rhetoric.

And when the shouting subsided in the prisoner's box, David Johannson, 25, of 821 Princess, had been sentenced to one month in prison for contempt of court.

Beforehand, Johannson had quietly carried the bulk of a well-argued defence for himself and 19-year-old Keith Gibbens, 4986 West Saanich Road,

The two men were before Judge William Ostler in provincial court on a joint charge of selling the Maoist publication Mass Line without a business licence outside the government liquor store at McKenzie-Ave. on-June 13.

But when Ostler brought down a verdict of guilty and sentenced the two to minimum fines of $25, Johannson lashed out verbally at the judge.

"You cannot obscure what you've done here by means of charades of language," he shouted at Ostler.

"You have just attacked the rights of the Canadian working class. You're a lackey judge. You're serving the enemies of the Canadian working class and they'll reckon

Ostler, who kept his temper throughout the outburst. quietly instructed Johannson he was in contempt and would be punished.

"I have nothing more to say to this group of flunkeys," Johannson shouted. "I hold this court in contempt. This is a fascist court"

The contempt of this court for the rights of the Canadian working class is going to be tried in the streets of

As he was sentenced on the contempt ruling Johannson raised his fist to the gallery of about 25 spectators.

A single fist was raised in response, and as Ostler was dismissing another joint charge of obstructing a police officer, Johannson could be heard singing outside the courtroom on his way to the cells.

Gibbens remained silent and expressionless at his companion's side during the emotional statement, as did Johannson's pretty 22-year-old wife Elaine.

But as Ostler was retiring to his chambers Mrs. Johannson shouted at his back. "Judge Ostler, you're a lackey of fascism and you're going to suffer the same fate as Eichmann," she cried.

The judge did not appear to hear the threat. * *

Earlier court was told a vendor in the liquor store asked the two to move and they refused. He subsequently called

Saanich police who said they could do nothing.

Ralph Lafferty, 1109 Sluggett, a witness for the prosecution, said he was a customer at the store, and when he saw the nature of what they were selling he asked if they

He said Johannson and Gibbens answered: "Do we need a licence to disseminate the words of Mao Tse-tung to the oppressed working people of Canada?"

In cross-examination by Johannson, Lafferty said he then called Saanich police and "told them you were selling communist newspapers in front of the liquor store and asked if that was legal.

Sanich police then attended. Inspector Harry Adams testified he completed a transaction for purchase of two issues at 10 and 25 cents.

Both charges were subsequently laid. During Johannson's cross-examination Ostler warned against immaterial questioning.

"This is not the place for ideological rhetoric," he said. In presenting his defence, Johannson argued that since they were not making a profit but were selling Mass Line "at cost" they were not conducting a business activity as defined they learned it was a communist paper.

'We hold our presence here to be a result of harassment by the anti-communist police."

Prosecutor J. W. Anderson said the definition of the bylaw did not signify "a monetary gain or profit," and suggested the defendant had implied "a gain to the people and a gain to himself to advance the theories" of Mass Line. Ostler ruled that while the two did not make any monetary profits from the newspapers, that was not the

H. the explaine of money for newspapers constituted a "commercial undertaking."

While he was sympathetic to the argument that the two were seeking to disseminate their political views, Ostler said, 'you can't disseminate such views as a commercial undering. There is nothing to stop you doing it at no charge. It was at that point, just after the prosecution had aske for a minimum fine of $25 for each, that Johannson's outburst

Trees Must Go to Stop Car Jams

By PETER McNELLY

All the trees on Begbie Street and all those on Finlayson between Blanshard and Cook will be cut down in road works projects approved by Victoria property owners in the Capital Budget referendum April 30, 1970.

Detailed plans for both projects already have been laid, and only a large public outcry can save the trees. For two reasons the trees on Begbie and Finlayson are marked to fall.

The city is committed to widening and extending these

And if you widen a developed street, you have only two ways to do it. Chop down the trees or buy up the property behind them and crated a boulevard with a centre green.

City engineer James Garnett says the scheme will also streamline the flow of traffic between downtown and two major shopping centres on city's north and northeast boundaries.

The idea is to create a triangle of four-lane roads for shopping and rapid entry into and exit from the city's core. Part of the triangle already Shelbourne will connect with Begbie, and Begbie will feed into Pandora and Johnson Streets. This will be complete by 1971. The final link is Finlayson. Traffic engineer Dave Campbell says Victoria's streets will soon become a jam of smog-belching automobiles unless some entry and exit routes are improved He says over 200,000 cars a day now cross the city's boundaries, an unusually high figure considering Victoria's medium-sized population. Campbell estimates Greater

Victoria will have a 44 per increase in population and a 67 per cent increase in automobiles in the next 10

The next question is why bother to spend the tax-payer's money to build roads to shopping centres?

Assistant city manager Bill Hooson says the reason is to enable people to go there and spend money so the shopping centres - and downtown business — can pay generous taxes and keep property taxes

And who knows, 10 years from now, when all those cars are driving around, you might be glad you can still drive to the store on those four-lane position to speculate on the possibility of Victoria's combining with other area municipalities to develop a regional road system.

As the number of cars using city streets increases with a rising population in Greater Victoria, a co-ordinated road or alternate transportation system may have to develop.

Campbell suggests, for example, that Victoria may eventually require a freeway from the Trans-Canada High-way into James Bay as an alternate route into the city. Victoria alone will never be able wholly to finance such a scheme is inevitable.

OTTAWA (CP) - Negotiations in the postal dispute, scheduled to have resumed today, have been postponed until Friday morning.

A spokesman for the Council of Postal Unions said the postponement was at th erequest of the federal treasury board although union negotiators had been prepared to meet this afternoon.

B.C. Attitude To Canada: 'I'm All Right, Jack'

By GINNY GALT

When the chips are down, British Columbians are Canadians first and British Columbians second, but the rest of the time they have an "I'm all right, Jack" attitude toward the rest of the country.

In fact, says political scien- pioneers at a colonial outpost tist Ronald Burns, British Columbians like to look at themselves even today as producing wealth for the capitalists in Ottawa and not receiving the proper federal benefits in return.

Both Wealth and Poverty Claimed

"Perhaps part of the problem between the federal and B.C. governments lies in B.C.'s habit of declaring great wealth, while at the same time raising cries of great need," he told 60 people at the first in a series of summer lectures in the Stu-dent Union Building sponsored by the University of Victoria. Few should know better than Burns, who was assistant deputy minister of finance with the B.C. government in the early 1950s and deputy toba in 1958. In 1955 he was appointed director of the Institute of Inter-Governmental Relations at Queen's University in Kingston. He is teaching a summer science at Uvic.

Burns said Premier Bennett makes his policies in com-plete negation of federal ideas. His financial demands far exceed those of any other province in the country, in-cluding Quebec. Burns cited the Roberts Bank Superport as an example of this.

The Chinese ship arrived

here Monday to pick up a cargo of wheat ordered by Peking.~

A load of fresh food including three live ducks, was put at the foot of the gangway Wednesday after the Lin Tong signalled for stores and water. After several hours it was still untquehed, and the supplier took it away.

Dock workers fresh water hose, but the Lin Tong's crew refused to lower a rope to haul it on board. Soon afterward the ship

Brooks claims that his persistent antiwar activity and economic studies, which reportedly displeased his superiors, are primarily re-sponsible for his shift on April to a position with neither title nor apparent function.

The PhD, economist, who also has an advanced degree in geology, said he tried but failed to obtain three other federal jobs before accepting the Canadian appointment His departure was labeled 'tragic' by Ralph Widener, executive director of Appalachian Regional Commission. Another expert in the field, Bruce Netschert of the National Economic Research Association, called Brooks "one of the brightest stars" in mineral economics.

Several other economic specialists, dissatisfied with recent transfers and changes, also preparing to leave the bureau of mines. Among them is Patricia Malin, who formerly worked with Brooks and said Wednesday that "the bureau doesn't seem to be planning much economic analysis anymore."

One man who until recently supervised them both ob served that Brooks was victim of a "change in direction" at the Interior Department by the Nixon administration.

"They have clearly decided that in mineral resources, the department should serve its client interests," he said. Now working for another government agency, the former supervisor asked that his name be withheld.

Peter A. Turcot, immediate converse past chairman of the government committee of the Montreal constant converse convers exchange, was named chairman of the study committee. All members of the six-man committee are from Montreal-based brokerage firms. The Moore committee headed by Trevor Moore of Toronto, retired senior vice-+ 1/2 Toronto, president of Imperial Oil Ltd., concluded that foreign Comin instant printing in Vancouver report the industry is suffering from too much competition, too many amateur printers and too few customers.

Most of the companies were formed about seven years ago following development of simplified rapid-print techniques. There are 10 firms in Vancouver specializing in instant printing, some of them with two or more outlets in the city. In a addition, some large printing establishments have rapid-printing departments and several large companies utilize the process to print their own brochures and house organs.

Maoism Comes To Court

OSTLER.

By STEVE HUME

The politics of confrontation came to a Victoria courtroom Wednesday afternoon with a flurry of slogans and Maoist rhetoric.

And when the shouting subsided in the prisoner's box, David Johannson, 25, of 821 Princess, had been sentenced to one month in prison for contempt of court.

Beforehand, Johannson had quietly carried the bulk of a well-argued defence for himself and 19-year-old Keith Gibbens, 4986 West Saanich Road.

The two men were before Judge William Ostler in provincial court on a joint charge of selling the Maoist publication Mass Line without a business licence outside the government liquor store at McKenzie Ave. on June 13. But when Ostler brought down a verdict of guilty and sentenced the two to minimum fines of $25, Johannson lashed out verbally at the judge.

"You cannot obscure what you've done here by means of charades of language;" he shouted at Ostler.

"You have just attacked the rights of the Canadian working class. You're a lackey judge. You're serving the enemies of the Canadian working class and they'll reckon

be punished.

"I have nothing more to say to this group of flunkeys,"

Canadian working class is going to be tried in the streets of As he was sentenced on the contempt ruling Johannson raised his fist to the gallery of about 25 spectators.

A single fist was raised in response, and as Ostler was dismissing another joint charge of obstructing a police officer, Johannson could be heard singing outside the courtroom on his way to the cells. Gibbens remained silent and expressionless at his companion's side during the emotional statement, as did Johannson's pretty 22-year-old wife Elaine.

But as Ostler was retiring to his chambers Mrs.

Johannson shouted at his back.

"Judge Ostler; you're a lackey of fascism and you're ag to suffer the same fate as Eichmann," she cried. The judge did not appear to hear the threat.

Earlier court was told a vendor in the liquor store asked the two to move and they refused. He subsequently called

Saanich police who said they could do nothing.

Ralph Lafferty, 1109 Sluggett, a witness for the prosecution, said he was a customer at the store, and when he saw the nature of what they were selling he asked if they had a business licence.

He said Johannson and Gibbens answered: "Do we need a licence to disseminate the worrs of Mao Tse-tung to the oppressed working people of Canada?"

In cross-examination by Johannson, Lafferty said he then called Saanich police and "told them you were selling communist newspapers in front of the liquor store and asked

Saanich police then attended. Inspector Harry Adams testified he completed a transaction for purchase of two issues at 10 and 25 cents.

Both charges were subsequently laid.

During Johannson's cross-examination Ostler warned against immaterial questioning.

"This is not the place for ideological rhetoric," he said. In presenting his defence, Johannson argued that since they were not making a profit but were selling Mass Line "at cost" they were not conducting a business activity as defined by the bylaw. *

He argued further that "the police did not arrive until they learned it was a Communist paper.

Prosecutor J. W. Anderson said the definition of the bylaw did not signify "a monetary gain or profit," and suggested the defendant had implied "a gain to the people and a gain to himself to advance the theories" of Mass Line. Ostler ruled that while the two did not make monetary profits from the newspapers, that was not the issue.

He said the exchange of money for newspapers constituted a "commercial undertaking."

were seeking to disseminate their political views, Ostler said, 'you can't disseminate such views as a commercial undertaking. There is nothing to stop you doing it at no charge.'

It was at that point, just after the prosecution had asked for a minimum fine of $25 for each, that Johannson's outburst alternate route into the city. Victoria alone will never be able wholly to finance such a project. Some joint financing scheme is inevitable.

Vancouver assistant administrator for the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, told the Times the premier wrongly inferred Wednesday that the union minister the fund established a year ago as a self-help program for Indians.

"We suggested that the fund be administered by a committee composed of Indian representatives from various bands," he said. "We did not propose that the union administer it." He said Bennett's refusal to allow Indians to administer the fund indicated the government does not trust or think Indians are capable of doing the job.

There is also country heat which is mellower and easier to bear, even when the mosquitoes are out for blood. And by way of compensation, there may be fireflies — wonderful insects that, to my sorrow, don't lend their magic our Vancouver Island nights.

Possibly there were fireflies by the Red River. If so, I'd forgotten about them when we pulled in from a Quebec road to a cottage string near the New Hampshire border.

Hasty Growth 'May Destroy

The World' VANCOUVER (CP) - Un planned and unrestrained economic growth could destroy the world, an economics professor said Wednesday. Dr. Lauchlin Currie, professor at Simon Fraser University and nce an economic assistant to ormer U.S. president Franklin D. Roosevelt, offered the lecture series at the university. Discussing the conflict be tween economic growth and the environment, Dr. Currie said:

"It is apparent we pay a heavy price for growth and the gratification of more and more vants for more and more peo through a deteriorating physical environment, a rapid using up of resources, increased competition between nations and conflict."

Asked by a student whether the world could be worn out this way before solutions to the problem are found, Dr. Currie said it is possible. But he warned against resort
